

Privacy Policy for Click to Call Chrome Extension

This privacy policy outlines the information that is collected, used, and disclosed by the Click to Call Chrome Extension. By installing or using this extension, you agree to the collection and use of information in accordance with this policy.

Information Collection and Use

The Click to Call Chrome Extension requires access to your browser tabs in order to perform certain functions, such as opening, closing, or modifying tabs, and displaying content on specific tabs or windows.

When you attempt to log in using the extension, the system will verify your credentials, such as your username and password, against a stored database of authorized users. The login result will then indicate whether you have successfully logged in or if your attempt was unsuccessful.

If the login result is successful, you will be granted access to the system or application and be able to perform actions or view content based on your level of authorization. If the login result is unsuccessful, you will be denied access and may be prompted to retry your login or seek assistance.

In addition to providing access to the system or application, the login result can also be used for auditing purposes, such as tracking login attempts or identifying potential security breaches.

Information Disclosure

The Click to Call Chrome Extension does not sell, trade, or otherwise transfer your personal information to outside parties.

Information Security

We take appropriate security measures to protect against unauthorized access, alteration, disclosure, or destruction of your personal information stored within our extension.

Changes to Privacy Policy

We reserve the right to modify this privacy policy at any time, so please review it frequently. If we make material changes to this policy, we will notify you here or by email, and the updated policy will be effective immediately upon posting.
